Mr Roesch produced his ledger, and although there was no date affixed, the entry was: "Mrs. Thurow, $100—legal arrivers." The witness explained that he sometimes did not put down dates.

"I received the money as a retaining fee tas a lawyer. No money was ever sent to the Club, and no other money was ever paid to me by Mrs. Thurow."

"I don't see in what respect your story differs from that told by Mrs. Thurow," said Senator O'Connor, who had come in and had listened attentively to Mr. Roesch's testimony.

"There is no difference in substance. She consulted you and paid you $100."

This seemed to please the witness at met, but he replied there was a good deal of difference. "Secretary Fay had nothing to do with it," he said, and Mrs. Thurow never went to the Club to bay money.

"No, sir; and it is an infamous statement to make," shouted the witness, shaking his finger at Mr. Goff.

"You will please answer the questions without any remarks," said Chairman Lexow.

"Don't get excited," remarked Senator Bradley; "there won't be any whitewashing here."

Mr. Goff said he simply inquired into the matter because Senator Roesch had shown such remarkably methodical habits in regard to his charge slips, which he had exhibited, that he had fairly paralysed Judge Ransom and the other lawyers present.

"Serst. Shire was transferred from the precinct in which you lived at your request," asked Mr. Goff.

"Yes."

"Why did you want him transferred?"

"I did not want him transferred particularly. Others wanted his place, however, and as these persons were friends of mine I did all I could to get the place, "Somebody had to get out of the way," continued Mr. Roesch. "When a friend of mine asks me to do him a favor, I do it, no matter who is in the way."

"Probably," replied Mr. Roesch, who was evidently getting worked up to a high pitch of excitement over Mr. Gof's searching questions.

All three men looked very uncomfortable.

Ex-Surrogate Ransom said that Capt. Slebert would like to be sworn and deny the statements made by the Cohen woman yesterday, but Chairman Lexow said that this could not be allowed.

The Captain would have ample opportunity to testify in his own behalf when the proper time came.

An exception had been made in the case of ex-Senator Poesch, and it was not to be taken as a precedent. When the Senator left the stand he looked as if he wished he had not been in such a hurry to answer the questions of the Committee. a nurry to answer the questions of the Committee.

Assistant District-Attorney Vernon Davis, the prosecutor in the case was there, and had just finished a long conference with Judge Martine, in connection with the case.

Mr. Jerome, in making his motion, said that he, representing the Lexow Committee, did not ask to have the indictment dismissed on the ground that the Mrs. Cohen was not guilty, for she had confessed absolutely that she was guilty of the crime charged in the indictment.

"I ask that the indictment be dismissed, Your Honor," said he, "on the ground of public policy, in that the prisoner has been of infinite use to the Committee in gathering important evidence which is likely to prove of inestimable worth to the people at large, and the government of which they are a part."

Mr. Jerome asked that the prisoner be not allowed to go on a suspended sentence, for he said that such a course would very likely leave loose a string which her enemies might pull at their leisure.

KASLO, B. C., SWEPT AWAY.

But was it true? That was the point to be established, and the despatch was far from convincing to the keen newspaper sense. It would be no light thing to print the list of names which had come over the wire, and carry to the friends of those people in startling headlines the declaration that all who were named below had perished. Then the report said there were forty dead. The excursion party numbered only twenty-three, besides the manager and train crew, at the start.

Doubting was not all there was to do, however, "The Evening World" had business on hand and attended to it promptly. Emergencies do not find this promptly. Emergencies do not find this office lagging. Inquiries by wire and in-office lagging. Inquiries by wir
